MODERN HEALTH CRUSADE ENROLLS A MILLION CHILDREN

Movement Under National Tuberculosis Association Broadens—Endorsed By American Red Cross and With Junior Red Cross.

That nearly 1,000,000 boys and girls throughout the nation have now been enrolled as modern health crusaders, and that recruiting to increase this membership to still greater numbers will soon begin, was announced to-day by the National Tuberculosis association, under whose direction this movement is conducted. The crusade, the association states, "centers about a simple but fundamental program of health 'chores', on the part of the children, and enlists the rising generation of the nation's citizens in a better understanding of individual and public health essentials."

"The American Red Cross," the association announces, "has now officially endorsed the Modern Health. H. D. Gibson, the general manager of the Red Cross, has written to the managers of its fourteen divisions, including the foreign division, bespeaking their co-operation in this movement. In a letter to the association Mr. Gibson says that he 'takes pleasure in endorsing the program of the Health Crusaders as giving an interesting and useful field for patriotic service of the school children and the promotion of national welfare.'"

Dr. H. N. MacCracken, national director of the Junior Red Cross, also commends the movement in a statement herewith "to every school child in the nation." During the summer, Dr. MacCracken says, the divisions of the Red Cross will be 'supplied with Modern Health Crusade material for distribution to all school teachers, and the individual score cards for the daily health chores, which each child must perform to become a member, will be available for the twenty millions of school children in America.'"

"New insignia for the coming year the association's announcement concludes, 'have now been prepared for the Crusaders' hosts. These consist of a button for the squire, a silver pin for the knight and a gold pin for the knight banneret. The button shows Liberty at war against disease, and the metal pins show a Crusader Bowman about to let his arrow fly from his Modern Health Crusader shield."

AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE. Officers and Men Have Shed Luster on the Name of America.

I cannot find words to express the depth and intensity of my admiration for the spirit, the morale and the achievements of the American army. It is difficult to speak of our boys and their leaders without using language which may sound rhapsodic, and which yet is no more than the bald and sober truth. I have met a great many officers and men on the boat going over to Europe, at our army bases, along the lines of communication and at the front.

Everywhere I found the same simple and unostentatious, yet grim and iron determination to hold life cheap for the honor and glory and safety of America; everywhere the same modest, sympathetic and soldierly bearing, and keen and quick-witted adaptability; everywhere the same note of splendid and eager courage of willing discipline and service, of uncomplaining endurance under hardships and discomforts, of buoyant good nature and humor, of clean and kindly thought and feeling.

There is grateful acknowledgement in the army of many things admirably done for the welfare of the men. And there is universal thankfulness that, as far as it is humanly possible to prevent it, the home authorities have not permitted policies to touch the army, and that merit is sought for, recognized and rewarded.

I did not hear a single real complaint except on one minor score—and on that the complaint is almost unanimous—namely, the stiff collar and general inappropriateness of our army uniform, which, by the universal verdict of our own men and of those of other nations, is both the least well appearing and the least practical of all uniforms. There is also some grumbling about the dilatoriness in making payment to soldiers, and about the slowness with which mail is handled—the latter a really serious grievance, for prompt and frequent communications from and with home is of great importance to the morale of the army.

In addition to the magnificent record our army has already made as a fighting force and the promise, amply warranted, of further great achievement, the capacity which our West Pointers in command of the great army bases have demonstrated for far-sighted, broad-visioned, boldly-conceived planning, for constructive work and for efficient business organization is nothing short of marvelous. I am pretty familiar with big organization work, but I have seen nothing which impressed me more, and very few things, indeed, which impressed me as much as the work planned, executed and administered at the French harbors, at our bases and along our line of supplies by that great chief, Gen. Pershing, and the officers whom he has placed in direct charge. Nor have I met any wiser or better posted or more hard-working men than those at the head of special departments of the army with whom I had occasion to come into contact.

And from what I have seen at Brest and elsewhere the same spirit of devoted and unselfish service and of intense, unsparring, ceaseless effort pervades the navy.

An immense debt of gratitude and recognition is due from the nation to its defenders. They have won golden opinions wherever they have been in Europe, they have been a revelation to other nations, they have shed luster upon the name of America. No American can see what our army and navy are doing in Europe in the way of fighting, of planning, constructing, administering, no one can see their morale, spirit and behavior without being deeply thrilled with pride and gratitude.

No American can come in touch with the affectionate admiration, with the trust and faith of the allied nations toward our country without feeling even more profoundly and reverently than before the high privilege of being an American citizen, and without being stirred by a solemn sense of the obligation to do whatever he individually may be capable of doing, to prove himself a worthy servant of the great republic in war as well as in peace, and an earnest and sincere help, however modestly and humbly, toward the realization of her high ideals and lofty mission.—By Otto H. Kahn, New York banker, back from an extended trip abroad.

Charles L. Forrest, who claimed to have been a private at Camp Greene, Charlotte, S. C., was in Rutland this week with a story of wounds received overseas, an illness resulting from being gassed and both arms broken in battle, all of which were proved false. It developed that Forrest had never seen overseas service, but had been in Camp Greene, having been given an "indefinite" furlough on June 21, since which time
